The characteristic feature of predatory/publisher questionable according to Beall (2013:47) as follows:

- The publisher does not state its headquarters location or misrepresents its true location
- The publisher sends spam e-mail solicitations for article submissions, editorial board memberships, or issue special editorships
- The publisher's website contains a significant typographical and grammatical errors or otherwise looks unprofessional
- The publisher's journal portfolio is large, with over 100 titles, many of them new and or with little content
- Papers in the publisher's journals are poorly copy edited
- The publisher's journals have a broad scope to Attract more papers (e.g. Journal of Medicine)
- The publisher's email addresses are from free providers such as gmail.com, yahoo.com, etc.

According to Dadkhah (2016, p. 415) state: "Some journals or publishers accept manuscripts that are flawed in terms of scientific quality (without peer review or by conducting low-quality review) and publish them by receiving charges without providing acceptable publishing services. Reviews these journals will be classified as predatory journals ".

Abstract | Full Text

In today’s world, especially in the information age in the field of management rapid radical changes are taking place. The Internet phenomenon occurring as a result of the development of globalization a information technology has revealed such concepts as “New Economy” and “Knowledge Economy”, in parallel to the services all over the world. Electronic commerce (e-commerce) emerging by this conceptual affections is growing very rapidly today. This rapid growth in e-commerce is reflected also in the sports sector, as the days passed in the sports sector, widespread electronic commerce is affecting the traditional sales and market methods and providing different convenience to consumers. Institutions and organizations in the sports sector of the global economy are required to learn and practice the e-commerce method which increases their ability to compete.
Public employee’ job satisfaction, life satisfaction and burnout levels’ assessment by some socia-demographic factors

This research aims to assess whether the public employees’ job satisfaction, life satisfaction and level of burnout differentiate by some demographic variables. Besides, the research addresses the correlations among the job satisfaction, life satisfaction and level of burnout of the public employees. The research’s units of analysis are the 436 public staff that perform their duties in Kiliç province center and the connected towns. Minnesota Job Satisfaction Index, Life Satisfaction Index, Maslach Burnout Index and Personal Information Form are used as the data collection tools. Explanatory factor analysis and correlation analysis are used as the data analysis methods. The research findings show that...

quotes from Beall

The principle of the establishment predatory journals are:

“set up homepage, sending spam emails to scientist, seat back and relax, wait for customer”.
